

Published on US Immigration Lawyer, Law Offices of Rajiv S. Khanna, PC, Rajiv S. Khanna (<https://immigration.com>)

---

Must we withdraw a PERM application if the employee is laid off?

Must we withdraw a PERM application if the employee is laid off? <sup>[1]</sup>

Submitted by Chief Editor on Feb 10th 2010

I am Mr. Jones, the employer. The employee, Mr. Smith, is no longer employed with us because of company's budget issue. However, we may hire him in the near future if circumstance changes. My question: Q1. Do we need to withdraw PERM LC for him that was submitted 2009? Q2. Question from the employee, Mr. Smith: If Mr. Smith filed an immigration benefit (e.g. visa, petition, change of status), does he need to answer YES / NO to the following question: "Has an immigrant petition ever been filed for you?" Basically: does submitting PERM/LC mean filing an immigrant petition? This question is often asked in application.

ANSWER:

A1. I do not know of any law that requires an employer to withdraw a PERM application if an employee leaves or gets laid off, but the employer still retains a good faith intention to hire them back. When we first filed the PERM application, we filed it in good faith, asserting to the USDOL under penalty of perjury that:

You have enough funds available to pay the wage or salary offered the alien and you will be able to place the alien on the payroll on or before the date of the alien's proposed entrance into the United States.

Both these assertions were true when we filed the PERM application on your behalf. So, we have followed the laws to the letter. Now, several months later, circumstances have changed. Do we have an affirmative duty to withdraw the PERM application? I do not see such a duty in the law.

Having a PERM in process, gives your employee an opportunity to continue extending their H-1 with any employer beyond 6 years. That is a considerable benefit.

The government could take the position that your application is now void on two grounds. First, you no longer have a job open, which is a continuing requirement. Second, you had an interruption in your ability to pay the intended wage, which is also a continuing requirement. We could lose the green card on both counts, but I see nothing illegal in letting the application stay pending. My opinion could change if we get an audit request from the USDOL. At that point, it may be inappropriate for us to continue. That is something we will review carefully at that time. Please do remind us. We will also post a note to your file.

A2. A PERM is not a visa application or an immigrant petition, a Form I-140 (the step after PERM) is.

Unless the context shows otherwise, all answers here were provided by Rajiv [2] and were compiled and reported by our editorial team from comments and blog on immigration.com [3]

Add new comment [4]

---

Source URL (retrieved on 23 Sep 2020 - 14:18): <https://immigration.com/faq/perm-labor-certification/must-we-withdraw-a-perm-application-if-employee-laid>

Links:

[1] <https://immigration.com/faq/perm-labor-certification/must-we-withdraw-a-perm-application-if-employee-laid>

[2] <http://www.immigration.com/law-offices-rajiv-s-khanna-pc>

[3] <http://www.immigration.com>

[4] <https://immigration.com/JavaScript%3Avoid%280%29%3B>